'Que it up!

1916: Lexington barbecue pioneer, Sid Weaver, opened his tent-covered pit cooking operation to a street corner in Uptown Lexington.

1920's: Jesse Swicegood & Will Johnson established their barbecue pits near the original courthouse, popularizing "Lexington-style Barbecue" as a local industry & cuisine. The court judge knew when it was time to recess for lunch when they smelled the smoke rolling in the windows!

Today: Over 14 Lexington-style barbecue restaurants each serve up to 500 or more hungry locals and tourists a day labeling Lexington, NC the "Barbecue Capital of the World".

Slow-roasted, pit-cooked pork shoulder served sliced or chopped with a drizzle of dip & a side of red slaw.
